SUCCESES AND CHALLENGES

The Government of Vietnam supports the cost of school meals for disadvantaged areas around 10,000–12,000/day or 220,000–700,000 Vietnamese Dong per student, per year for public schools. Resources are mobilized from the government and family contributions. The program covers pre-primary and primary students of private and public schools.

Vietnam reported that the country was affected by natural disasters, conflict and a health epidemic during the 2017–18 school year, causing a decrease in the number of students fed, frequency of school feeding, level of food basket variety, and the size of rations. Survey responses indicate that the disasters led to changes in the targeting approach, changes in feeding modality, and — in at least one case — school feeding ceased operations.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

To prevent or mitigate overweight/obesity this school feeding program used nutritional requirements for food baskets, food restrictions on or near school grounds, nutrition, physical, food and health education. Special training or certification programs required for cooks/caterers included nutrition, portions/measurements, menu planning and food safety and hygiene.

Besides subsidies and extension support given to all farmers, medium- and the large-scale farmers received school feeding-specific training, mobile and electronic payments, and forward contracts. Given preferential treatment, small-scale farmers and/or companies successfully competed to sell food to the program. Most (75–100%) of the cooks/caterers were women and were paid by implementing partners. Families contributed to the program, and companies of all sizes were involved — in food trading, food processing transport, catering, and supply of utensils.
